Over the summer, I worked at a non-prot that focused on migrant placement and success after immigrating to Ireland. I worked specically at the Citizenship Application Support Service division. While there, I helped to digitize their less for the last three years, create a database of their client's applications, administrative work, and even was a citizenship application consultant by the end of my internship. One of the best parts of my internship was all my coworkers had immigrated to Ireland as well, so they had diverse perspectives and tips, as well as sympathy, for the clients we were working with. e biggest takeaway from this experience was the importance of delegation in a work environment. While my manager was extremely friendly, there was a lack of delegation when it came to intern's work tasks. is led to miscommunication at times, which at times, led to lack of work or e ciency on projects; this was eye-opening for me as I am
